Borne to Sea by Tide, Man Drowns Off Point Fermin

Workman on Fortifications Falls
 From Rocks and Goes Under
 as Friend Watches

J. L. Morrell, 38, a workman employed on the Government fortifications at Point Fermin, was carried to sea at the Point and drowned while J. E. Whitmore, employed with Morrell, stood helpless on the rocks.

Morrell and Whitmore were idle for the day, owing to the rain and visited the rocks below the Government lighthouse hunting mussels. Morrell slipped from the rocks and fell in a hole in which there was thirty feet of water. All attempts to climb the rocks again proved futile and a heavy sea came booming ashore before Whitmore could summon help.

The sea carried Morrell out beyond the protecting fringe of rocks where he was caught by a tide rip, although, he swam strongly toward the shore, he was carried beneath the waves. The police were notified and Lieutenant Spellman and E. D. Seward secured a launch and searched for the body without success. Morrell was a native of Sweden and unmarried.

C.W. Wallace, Ontario Rancher, Kills Self

ONTARIO, Jan. 4.—Leaving a short note addressed to his wife: "I can't stand this longer," Charles Nelson Wallace, wealthy rancher of this city and Lavena, committed suicide with poison last night at his home at 1202 West A street, this city. Financial affairs are believed responsible.

Wallace was found dead in bed this afternoon by his son, Ben Wallace. Mrs. Wallace is tonight in a critical condition at her home in Lordsburg.

Ben Wallace told the coroner that his father had been despondent ever since January 1st when a financial deal, which was to have netted him a big sum, fell through. M. E. Wallace, a wealthy Los Angeles man and a brother, and Colonel William Burnham, a wealthy banker of Groton, S. D., were the others involved in this deal.
