Riverside Public Utilities (RPU) owns a significant amount of property primarily through the acquisition of numerous private water companies over the past century. Property has also been acquired for operational purposes of RPU.

It is intended that only property required to provide service to current or future customers shall be retained or purchased by RPU. Property may be kept for extended periods of time if there is any anticipation that the property may be required for operational purposes at any time in the future. Furthermore, if property owned by RPU is in an area where future property will be required, but its exact location not yet determined, it is appropriate to retain the existing property until such time as the sales proceeds can be utilized to purchase replacement property for operational needs.

Property shall periodically be reviewed by RPU and any property deemed surplus shall be sold when economically and practically feasible with the advice of the Board and approval of the City Council. Market conditions and number of parcels may require property disposition to occur over an extended period of time as approved by an ad hoc committee established by the Board.
